History Slavic duchy under Piast dynasty emerged in late 10th cent. in region bet. Oder and Warta rivers, under Boleslav I (992-1025), it conquered territory of the Slavs W to the Oder, Moravia, and Kraków, and was recognized as Polish kingdom; invaded by Mongols 1241; its personal union with Lithuania by marriage 1386 established Jagellon dynasty, after long struggle with Teutonic Knights, obtained West Prussia and East Prussia (q.v.) 1466; after 1572, Polish crown became elective, and the nobility stronger than the monarch; in 17th cent. several disastrous wars led to loss of much territory. New wars and political weakness led to three partitions: 1772, 1793, and 1795, in which Poland was completely dismembered and divided among Russia, Prussia, and Austria. Partly reestablished by Napoleon, 1807-15, as Grand Duchy of Warsaw, on part of the territory of which, following the Congress of Vienna 1815, was constituted a kingdom (frequently called Congress Poland or Russian Poland) under the Russian crown (ab. 49,000 sq. m.; * Warsaw). Organized as autonomous kingdom of Poland in personal union with Russia 1815-30; lost autonomy after Polish Revolt 1830-31; after unsuccessful rising of Jan. 1863, became merely a Russian province; invaded by Germans and Austrians in World War I 1914-18; proclaimed independent republic 1918. West Prussia, except Danzig (see GDANSK), and Posen (see also POLISH CORRIDOR), ceded by Germany 1919, obtained part of Silesia, Vilna, part of Ukraine and of White Russia, and Teschen 1919-38; governed by 1921 constitution, amended after Pilsudski's coup d'état 1926; 1935 constitution formally ended democratic parliamentary rule; Danzig crisis precipitated World War II 1939. E and cen. parts completely overrun and subjugated by Germany Sept. 1939; as result of treaty bet. Germany and U.S.S.R. 1939, Pomorze, Poznań, and Upper Silesia annexed to Germany, central sector constituted into German-controlled Government-General of Poland, and eastern part incorporated in U.S.S.R., small parts later ceded to Slovakia and Lithuania. Reoccupied by Soviet armies in 1944 and 1945. After World War II part E of Curzon Line (q.v.) taken by U.S.S.R. and added to Belorussian and Ukrainian S.S.R.s., received Danzig, S two thirds of East Prussia, most of Pomerania along the Baltic, and regions of Germany E of the Oder (E Brandenburg and most of Silesia); establishment of Soviet-dominated government following controlled elections 1947; adopted new constitution 1952; became a member of the Warsaw Treaty Organization 1955; participated with U.S.S.R. in invasion of Czechoslovakia 1968; its W boundary recognized as permanent by West Germany 1970.
